President Musings by David Putnam

Dear Friends, I hope this edition of our newsletter finds all of you well! This summer has been rather strange. A diminished, yet still threatening, pandemic is still with us, and the summer weather has been most unseasonable here in New England. Our summer has featured either heavy rains, or extremely humid temperatures. As fall unfolds, I am hoping for some milder temperatures, and less rain. Fall is supposed to be New England's signature season, so I hope mother nature will live up to our expectations.

Annual Meeting: Our annual meeting went off without a hitch on July 31st. The change of venue was initially an inconvenience, but later proved to be a blessing. The former VFW hall that we rented for this year's meeting featured air conditioning, which was a wonderful change from previous venues. We had eighteen members in attendance, which isn't too bad considering the ongoing pandemic concerns. We had two new members in attendance: Donna Waite and Marquita Chambers. Lucille Walker, 100 years young, was in attendance again this year accompanied by her son Philip Thibault. Our featured speaker was Bernard Fishman, Director of the Maine State Museum. His presentation, 19th Century Maine in 3D, was unique, informative, and enjoyable.

Elections: The main item of association business at the meeting was the election of new Executive Board and a new Board of Directors. The following persons were unanimously elected by a voice vote: President-David Putnam; Vice-President/Secretary-Renee Seiders; Treasurer-Deirdre Putnam. Board of Directors-Ruth Riopell, Dale Gunn, and Tracie Ott. Tracie is new to the board of directors, and I thank her for her interest and time.

New Members: I would like to welcome three new members: Joan Baillie, a descendant of the Orff, Sukeforth, Overlock, Kaler, Mink, Keene, Achorn and Hoffses families; Susan Healy, a descendant of the Rominger, Anton, Seidlinger and Eichorn/Achorn families; and Katelyn Edmunds. Welcome aboard folks and thanks for sharing your genealogical journey with us!

A Waldoboro Based Work of Fiction: I received an email last month from David O. Stewart, an author of historical fiction and a descendant of the Overlock Family. David advised me that his new historical fiction trilogy will be based in Broad Bay/Waldoboro and will deal with successive generations of the fictional Overstreet Family. The first book, The New Land, will be available on November 16. He describes the first book as an immigrant's tale, portraying the dangers and adventure of the New England Frontier during the founding years of Broad Bay. The book will cover the period of the French and Indian War, as well as the War of Independence. Best of all, one of the characters is a Hessian deserter! As the descendant of a deserter from Fort George, I am excited to read the book. The second book of this trilogy, The Burning Land, will come out in May of 2022 and will deal with the Civil War era. The final book, The Resolute Land, will come out in October of 2022. This volume will take place during World War Two. Can a movie or made for television series be far behind? I will review the book in the winter issue of the newsletter.

The Moravian Site-Lot 9: I recently received a query from Gary Shaffer of Maine. He is doing research on the chain of ownership of Lot 9, the former site of the Moravian Meeting House. Specifically, he is interested in the chain of ownership in the 19th century. Anyone with information relevant to this research can contact Gary through me at dputnam925@msn.com.

Octoberfest in Waldoboro: Deirdre and I were in Maine last weekend, and we attended the Octoberfest Celebration in Waldoboro. The event featured food, games, music, and crafts. We had a wonderful time! It is great to see Waldoboro still celebrating its German roots. Deirdre took some pictures and has posted them on our Facebook page at www.facebook.com/waldoboromaineancestors.

We also had a chance to explore a lovely public park along the river. The Waldoboro Village River Park starts in the rear of the parking lot of the American Legion Hall on Jefferson Street in Waldoboro. The path goes through a meadow and down to the banks of the Medomak. There are some stately trees and hand-hewn wooden benches along the path. The river is the real attraction though; it flows steadily and peacefully by on its way to Broad Bay and the Atlantic. If our ancestors came back today, they might not recognize parts of Waldoboro. However, they would recognize the river, which was such a big part of their commercial, agricultural, and social life. Standing alongside the river under the old trees, I couldn't help but wonder how many of the ancients stood there and saw the same scene that I was looking upon. As I enjoyed this untrammeled and tranquil river scene, I felt a brief moment of connectivity with our ancestors. I am sure many of them stood near this spot, taking a break from their daily struggles, and contemplated this view of the ever flowing, timeless Medomak. When next you visit Waldoboro, I strongly suggest you stop and enjoy this lovely and timeless scene.

Donations: I would like to thank the following members for their generous donations; Fred and Marjorie Snell made a donation in memory of Lois Benner Gatcombe; Tracie and Douglas Ott.

In closing, I would like to thank all of our members who contributed food, money and time to make our annual meeting a success. Keep on Searching and Sharing!

THE MEMBERSHIP YEAR IS JULY 1st TO JUNE 30th DUES SHOULD BE PAID ON OR BEFORE JULY 1st EACH YEAR.

Lucille is holding her doll in the photo, she is about six years old - far left. The Overland car (2nd from right) belongs to Alfred Bruce Higgs. The house location is not known exactly but Lucille remembers it was next to the cemetery where Vernon was buried. (Hwy 235 & old Rt. 1). Nellie would go over to the cemetery to talk to Vernon who died of 'sleeping sickness' because she thought he was lonely. The Dorchester crowd (Meyers) spent time there.

Lucille is the incredible and talented artist. She is a graduate (1947 to 1950) of the Art Institute of Chicago. Shortly after the above photos were taken came the Depression. The Higgs family relocated to Chicago for the next twenty years.

Lucille at 100+, born January 23, 1921, still lives independently in Cumberland, ME. She still loves flying to her place in Palm Coast, Florida and visiting a former Family summer home in Sandy Point on Penobscot Bay. It is a notable location since the Battle of Castine took place in the front yard. Pictured: Lucille (Benner) Higgs Thibault Walker with her son, Philip Thibault. Captain Nelson Norman Ülmer, Master Mariner

Submitted by Walter Ulmer, Jr.

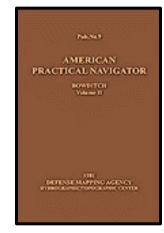

This article was prepared to assist in our modest and belated attempts to find information on the life of my seagoing grandfather, Nelson Norman Ulmer (1875-1955).

The first of our Ulmer family, John (Johannes) (1688-1763?) often referred to as "John Sr., came to Waldoboro (Broad Bay) on the ship Lydia in 1742 with his son John Jr. (1736 – 1809.) John Sr. had been a Prussian soldier, a schoolteacher, and a leader in the Lutheran faith. This background was soon put to good use in the Broad Bay community. He was apparently the first pastor of the church now in its second location and known as the German Lutheran Church in Waldoboro, as well as schoolteacher and organizer of the local militia. Much about the family's arrival from Germany—from a town near Ulm—and their various adventures is in the book Major Phillip M. Ulmer: A Hero of the American Revolution by Patricia Hubert; and in the excellent Ulmer descendant's article in the spring 2021 OBBFHA Newsletter.

Nelson Ulmer was born in Verona, Maine. His home was in Hampden, just southwest of Bangor on the Penobscot River. His wife died shortly after my father was born. Dad (Walter F. Ulmer, 1903 - 1978) and his two brothers were raised in Hampden by their aunt and Grandparents. He was rarely home after having gone to sea as a teen-ager. My Dad took me to meet him briefly two or three times in Hampden. We lived in Bangor, just up the road. I was five or six years old. He was a very powerful figure with a bit of palsy. I wish I had been able to ask questions and make notes, but those 1930s moments were not conducive to a youngster interrogating his sea captain grandfather. A Master Mariner, he apparently earned his license for "Steam and Sail" at a young age. His ships of various size and cargo often tied up near Hampden on the Penobscot River, often at the coal wharf. Captain Ulmer sailed down the Penobscot to many American ports including Galveston, New York, Newport News, and Norfolk from which he mailed letters home. He sailed overseas also. His cargo probably included coal, lumber, and various provisions.

He was Master of several ships. Apparently his largest was a five-masted clipper of unknown name that my dad remembered seeing docked near Hampden. There were very few sailing ships of that size. It must have been tricky handling it in the Penobscot River, which seems not two football-fields wide at that point and with a reasonable current. During his working years he carried a pistol in his belt, understandably common at the time among ship captains. His ship the John Douglas was wrecked on a ledge near Rockland. (I can find no public record of that shipwreck.) Among the salvaged items was a hanging lamp which was used for years in the family home in Hampden. It is not now in family hands. He was at one time Marine Superintendent of the Franco-American Line and also of the Polish American Line with office in New York. In the late 1930s he retired into Sailor's Snug Harbor retirement home on Staten Island in New York.

Our brief visit to the excellent Maine Maritime Museum several years ago in Bath did not reveal much. It was a short visit, and we were looking for records of his ships and found little of significance. The only personal item of Nelson Ulmer ever in my possession, given to me by my dad, was the 1909 edition of American Practical Navigator by Nathaniel Bowditch, which was primarily tables of latitude and longitude, with a few of my grandfather's notes. (His logs, maps, charts, and papers have been lost to the family-- at least to my part of the family.) I fear we may not be able to do much more research in person in Maine.

Here is a brief, paternal-only, lineup of my Ulmer forebears starting with me, to keep these notes in concert with the OBBFHA interest in lineage: Walter F. Ulmer, Jr., born in Bangor (1929 -); Walter F. Ulmer, born in Hampden ? (1903 – 1989); Nelson Ulmer, born in Hampden? (1875 – 1955); Plummer Ulmer, born in Verona (1848 – 1921); Levi Ulmer, born in Camden (1821 – 1889); Isaac Ulmer, born in Thomaston (1797 – 1889); George Ulmer, born in Waldoboro, (1760 – 1825); John Ulmer, Jr. born in Germany (1736 – 1809); John Ulmer (Sr.) born in Germany (1668 – 1763?)

My wife Martha Rayder Ulmer and I have three sons. Among our eleven grandchildren there are three boys one adopted—with the Ulmer name. As a family with only casual interest in ancestry in the past, we have been in recent decades doing some homework. Broad Bay history is of course a rich treasure. Any information on Nelson Ulmer's ships or ports would be appreciated. The Ulmer family tendency toward military service continues. My father served as an Army battalion commander in WWII. Two of my sons are retired Army officers in addition to our post-military occupations. I retired as a Lieutenant General. And was a second-string guard on the 1946 Bangor High football team!

After retiring from the military, I became President and CEO of the Center for Creative Leadership (CCL), an educational institution devoted to leadership research and education whose main campus is in Greensboro, N.C. My last research project for the Army after leaving CCL was a 2010 review of the leadership behavior of Army division commanders in post-9/11 operations. (Our study group found their typical performance was remarkably good.) These kinds of chores keep getting in the way of discovering what my ancestors have been doing!

DR. FRANCES M. EVELETH

Dr. Stahl reports: "Born in Phillips, Maine in 1832, Dr. Frances M. Eveleth was one of the town's most active and useful citizens. He was a Civil War surgeon, a country doctor, supervisor of schools, local pharmacist, and always a backer and promoter of the town's business development. A quiet and energetic man, he operated his farm as an agricultural model of its day. His supervisorship of the schools cost him in professional activity far more than the monetary return from the office. He backed every project of new enterprises in the town with his time and money.

His life here marked a deviation from that of the earlier leaders. He was in the fullest sense of the word a community builder, and his death from paralysis at sixty-three represented the loss of a leader at a time when the town's sorest need was men of his character and vision." Masthead: Launching the Brig Stacy Clark. Joseph Clark, the great Waldoboro shipbuilder, major employer, and wealthiest resident, died suddenly of heart failure July 19, 1875. The town was fortunate to have Mr. Clark's very capable son, Edwin O. Clark, to carry on the many family enterprises. Red arrow points to the framework the ship is built on and launched from once finished.

A Treasure Waiting to Be Found: Bund und Blatt and OBBFHA Newsletters

To find the treasure, enter obbfha.org, then select Publications. My sisters, Becky, Carol, and I are reading all of the newsletters. We are at present up to 2007 (50 newsletters so far). Knowledge of our ancestors, and yours, has increased considerably. Besides searching for names and reading about our ancestors, we take great pleasure in the stories and constantly give thanks to our immigrants for their tenacity.

In 1992, beginning with a HYLER name search of the early Old Broad Bay immigrants, Gary Horlacher (Ph.D. from BYU in family science (2005)), became interested in the other families, along with Genealogist, Wilford Whitaker, his co-author of Broad Bay Pioneers. Because of their interest we have a treasure in the Bund und Blatt (1992-2000 Jan.-Jun.) newsletter they created. The large number of documents and information they discovered were placed in the newsletter and then became a source for their book. As of August 2000, the newsletter is titled Old Broad Bay Family History Association (OBBFHA).

At the web site you will also find an "Every name index to volumes 1-11 (new series) 2004-2014 OBBFHA" completed by Helen Shaw, C.G. Work is being done to create a complete Index of Names for all the newsletters. Once that is finished, you will be able to locate your ancestors with ease—although I highly recommend you read them all.

This is from the first page of the Bund und Blatt created by Will Whitaker and Gary Horlacher. Broad Bay Roots Project Announced

W. W. "Will" Whitaker, an experienced genealogist of over 30 years of American and English research, and Gary Horlacher, a graduate student of Linguistics and German and Scandinavian studies announced a joint effort to research the Old-World Roots of the nearly 150 families that made up the German emigrants to Waldo's Patent at Old Broad Bay. (Waldoboro). Using the masterful study of Old Broad Bay by J. J. Stahl as a starting point, these two intrepid researchers will combine their expertise in American and European research and attempt to trace the German (and Swiss and French) origins of these families, through the first two generations in America. Gary, using the records available in the Family History Library in Salt Lake City, will search out the German (and other) origins of these families, using microfilm records of the original church and parish registers of their hometowns and villages. Will, by researching available North American documents relating to these families and this area, will help clarify the first two generations in America. This combination will give a more complete history and genealogy of these important emigrant ancestors.

It is hoped that through advertising and a regularly published newsletter, we will be able to contact descendants of these families who will be able to shed more light on these early generations.
