A Portion of Conrad Heyer's Life A DAR Essay by Mina Butler

Conrad Heyer was the first child born of German parentage in the Waldoboro Colony. His father died of hunger and exposure the first winter after they arrived in this country. He grew up in this settlement. When he was fiftee years old, the Old German Meeting House was dedicated; he sang in the choir at this dedication.

When the Revolutionary War broke out, he was in Boston, having gone up on a coasting vessel. He enlisted in th army at Cambridge and he served with the army three years. He was stationed for a long time at Fort Ticonderog where he helped build portions of the fortifications. He crossed the Delaware river with George Washington as one of his bodyguards. These men suffered great hardships, being poorly dressed and suffering from intense cold At the close of the Revolutionary War, he returned to Waldoboro and settle on a large farm. Contad Heyer not only had the honor of being the first child born in that settlement, but also lived to the greatest age.

His first burial was in a lot on his own farm. Later he was taken up and put in the community burial place. On June 17, 1856, his body was taken up for the second time and reburied in the Old German Meeting House Cemetery. According to the history this was a day long to be remembered in Waldoboro. Thousands of people came from far and near, probably the largest number ever assembled in this town. At about eleven o'clock on this morning, Colonel A. W. Clark and his aides, who were mounted on horses led by the Conrad Rifle Guards. They were named after Conrad Heyer and these men rode out and met the Rockland City Guards under the Command c Hiram G. Berry. This company was dressed in very handsome uniforms with bean skin hats. Before they escorte the casket to its final resting place, they were served dinner. In the afternoon they formed in line ahead of the hearse which was draped with the American flag and it was followed by The Conrad Guards, then a large following of townspeople. At the grave they sang dirges and prayers were offered by a number of ministers. The read the forty-sixth Psalm and a large choir outside the church sang the "Landing of the Pilgrims," After this ceremony he was buried very near the entrance of this old German Church. Later a monument was erected which bears this inscription: "This monument is erected by citizens of Waldoboro to perpetuate the memory of an hones and worthy man."

This cemetery nearly surrounds the Old German Meeting House which sets on a steep hill. The exact date of the erection of this church is unknown, but the first real record was in 1773 when it was used for town meetings. The desk in the pulpit in this church is nine feet high. The communion table and contribution boxes are home made and have been in use ever since the church was built. Conrad Heyer's picture has a prominent place in the old church.

It was at this last burial of Conrad Heyer that my maternal great grandfather and great grandmother met. They were both descendants of Conrad Heyer.

Eugley says Miller School will desecrate historic site

Ruel Eugley, a lifelong Waldoboro resident, is concerned that an addition planned for the Miller School will disturb a historical burial site.

Eugley, who is 79, is a direct descendant of a pioneeer who was buried here in 1754 following a winter of great privation and untold suffering.

Eugley contends the site should be remembered for its historical significance, and marked with an appropriate memorial.

He feels that people today should not forget that settlement in Waldoboro took guts and determination. In 1748, the original settlers, nearly all of whom were of German stock, were massacred by Indians. The second group, also of German stock, arrived in September of 1753, and almost immediately ran into serious trouble.

According to a circular that General Waldo circulated to solicit them, they were to have received six months support. However, they never got the supplies, and were left wholly unprovided for during the winter. For all practical purposes, Gen. Waldo abandoned them.

Most of the settlers were lodged in an unheated shed for the winter. According to a 1910 Town History, seventeen settlers died from exposure and starvation, or from diseases induced by their privations, and were buried on a knoll in the field west of the shed. The Town History maintains the site should be enclosed and marked with a suitable monument.

This is the spot that Eugley says will be desecrated by the Miller School addition.

Martin Heyer, the father of Conrad Heyer, is buried there. Martin died before Conrad was born, and in those days legend had it that a man who never saw his father would be blessed with the gift of healing sore eyes and other ills by a look or touch. Conrad was widely believed to have this gift, and according to tradition he accomplished a wonderful cure for the daughter of a rich Bostonian. The story goes on to say that Conrad refused to accept any reward for his cure, as he was alraid of annuling his healing gift.

Conrad fought in the Revolution under Gen. Washington, and was at the Battle of Bunker Hill and was a member of the advance guard at the crossing of the Delaware. He retired to Waldoboro, and was known as a hard-working, temperate man, and lived to the age of 106.

The Bangor Daily News has an article with pictures of the German Lutheran Church service held on August 5th and 6th., 2000. Section H, H-1, H-3, which was part of the annual meeting for OBB. A lengthy article and nice pictures of the interior of the church are included.

Waldoborough occupies the middle portion of the eastern side of Lincoln County. The town is longest from north to south. Its area is about 25,376 acres. Nobleboro and Jefferson bound it on the west, Washington, Union and Warren, in Knox County, bound it on the north and east, Friendship lies on the south-east, and Bremen on the south-west. The southern portion of the town is penetrated by Broad Bay, an extension of Muscongus Bay; and Medomac River passes through the town from north to south, emptying into Broad Bay. Goose River separates it from Friendship, on the south-west. The principal ponds within its limits are Medomac, and Little Medomac. Pemaquid and Duck Puddle ponds lie on the western, and southern and Western ponds on the eastern border. The surface of the town is agreeably diversified. Willett's and Benner's hills are the highest eminences. Granite is the principal outcropping rock. There are many good farms in town, and the soil generally yields well when thoroughly cultivated. Hay and potatoes are the principal crops raised for outside markets.

The islands belonging to Waldoborough and Upper Narrows, Hog, Poland's, Hadlock, Hungry, Otter, Jones', Garden, and several smaller. The principal village is at the mouth of the Medomac River, a little south of the centre of the town. The productive establishments here consist of an iron foundry, an oakum mill, a carding and cloth-dressing mill, a grain-mill, saw and planing-mills, marble and granite yards, a pottery, ship-yards, furniture and moulding-mills, a door, sash and blind factory, a carriage factory, etc. Waldoborough is on the Knox and Lincoln Railroad, 28 miles from Bath and 16 from Wiscasset. There are some fine buildings in the village, and several handsome residences. Many of the streets are set with shade trees, consisting of maple, elm and horse-chestnut, some of them a hundred years old. There were built in Waldoborough collection district in the year ending June, 1880, eight vessels, having an aggregate tonnage of 5,064.02.

Waldoborough was included within Muscongus, or Waldo Patent. It was first settled between 1733 and 1740, by Scotch-Irish and German immigrants, brought in chiefly by the influence of General Waldo. Shortly after the latter date the town was attacked by Indians, the buildings burned, and the inhabitants tomahawked or carried away captives. In 1748, immediately after the treaty of Aix-la-Chapelle, the settlement was revived. In 1752-53, Samuel Waldo, a son of the general, visited Germany, and succeeded in obtaining about 1500 settlers from that country. A large part of these settled on the western side of Broad Bay, but in 1763-4 the lands on this side were claimed by Drowne under the Pemaquid Patent, and Massachusetts finally made Medomac River the western boundary of the Muscongus Patent. The settlers were therefore obliged to buy of Drowned the lands that had been assigned them by Waldo. Very soon after this claim was satisfied, the Drown claim was extended over the same territory; and about 300 of the settlers, disappointed and discouraged, sold out their property and immigrated to South Carolina, yet there still remained a large and flourishing colony, of about 80 families which in 1773 was incorporated into a town named in honor of its founder. Conrad Heyer, the first male citizen of Waldoborough was born in Broad Bay plantation in 1749 and died in 1856 at the age of 106 years, ten months and 9 days. He served in the Revolutionary War, and was wont to relate his adventures in that struggle with much zest. Waldoborough was made the shire town of the county in 1786 and thus remained until 1880, when the courts were removed to Wiscasset. The town was first represented in the general court in 1780 by Jacob Ludwig a citizen of German extraction.

On the arrival of these German Pilgrims, a Lutheran Church was a once organized by them, and in 1762 a minister, the Reverand John M. Schaeffer, was settled. His successors up to 1820 were Reverand Mr. Croner, Reverand R. B. Ritz, and Reverand Mr. Starman. the churches are now two Congregational, two Baptist and four Methodist. There is a small circulating libray, and a library of about 1000 volumes, belonging to the Waldoborough Library Association.

("The Lincoln County News, is brisk, vigorous, and independent, and withal gives dues attention and fair treatment to the affairs of the county. It is edited and published by Samuel L. Miller, Esquire. Thursday is the day of publication.)

The town has 22 public school houses; which with other school property, are valued at 14, 000 the valuation of estates in 1870 was $1,164,382. In 1880 it was $1, 135,023. Tips from Joyce Ball Brown (Joyce is the Martha Stewart of genealogy)

If you are researching at the Maine State Library and you find a book that cannot be photocopied, it may be possible that the staff can photocopy it, and if that can't be done, you may request that a photograph of the page be taken. the cost for this can run as much as $16.00 per page. If this is your only way to get the page, it might be worth it. If you have the title and author of the book, you may be able to have the book sent to your local library by interlibrary loan system. You may have to perform an out of state search to find the book. The librarians will do the search and you will only have to pay about $1.00 for the search.

A big THANK YOU goes to the Waldoboro Library for opening up for us on August 5th during our annual meeting. Thank you!!!

Letter from the President

Dear Members,

The Genealogy Workshop sponsored by Old Broad Bay Family Historical Association on August 5th and 6th this year was a great success. Saturday, members gathered in the basement of the Meenahga Grange Hall in Waldoboro for continental breakfast and lots of information to share. The business meeting was held at 11:00 with election of officers as follows:

President, Randall Gross

Vice President, Richard Castner

Secretary, Renee Seiders

Treasurer, Bill Conary

Registrar, Doug Prescott

The first order of business was to refund money for past newsletters that were not received. If you wish to have a refund, please send a letter to Randy Gross, P.O. Box 1242, Waldoboro, ME 04572. The second order of business was a vote to change the name of the newsletter to Old Broad Bay Family History Association Newsletter and we hired Ann Hart to produce the newsletter for us.

Lunch was held at Dutch Neck Community Center in Waldoboro which consisted of cold cuts, salad, baked beans, knockwurst, and tons of desserts. It was delicious. We wish to thank St. Paul's group for providing this service.

On Sunday morning, we made a tour of cemeteries, including Sidelinger Cemetery in Union, and afterward, continued on up Sidelinger Rd. to the farm of Jerry Sidelinger who is a descendant of Daniel Sidelinger, (son of Martin). Jerry has a large blueberry farm. He also works at Shaw's in Rockland. Then we visited Levansaler Cemetery in Washington, and Borneheimer Cemetery in Waldoboro, and last on our list of cemeteries was the Heyer Cemetery on Route 220. Three other cemeteries were visited by a select few and some more family info was uncovered.

Some of us lunched at Moody's Diner. At 3:00 p.m. the German Lutheran church service was held with the Reverand Michael Murphy of West Waldoboro and the Reverand William Luger of Water of Life Lutheran Church in Newcastle. They performed a Christmas service in German and English. This was sponsored by the German Lutheran Ladies Auxillary with refreshments after the service. Thank you, ladies.

If you would like more than one speaker next year, please let me know of your preference. My address is P. O. Box 77, Waldoboro, ME 04572. We have been in contact with Josef Roggenbauer, a retired Professor of German Language at the University of Maine who has agreed to be our speaker for next year at 11:00 a.m. at Meenahga Grange (The place where wild blueberries grow") on August 4th.

(Complaints and comments may be sent to Joyce Ball Brown, P.O. Box 41, Nobleboro, ME 04555 who will try to resolve the problem. She is known as the Yankee Troubleshooter, and the Road Warrior, our volunteer lookup person.)

Dear Joyce,

I am sending you the letters and form I sent to the National Park at Gettysburg so that Henry Frank Sidelinger could appear on the "Wall of Faces" Images honoring the heroes at Gettysburg and the Battle of Little Round Top at the Visitors Center. Henry's picture should be on the wall for at least a year. Thank God for that portrait of him at the Matthews Museum in Union, Maine. Otherwise it would not have been possible. This gives me the opportunity to honor Henry for his efforts at Little Round Top.

I have been able to confirm his marriage 1865 at Rockland to Mrs. Elizabeth (P____) Stevens through another researcher I found on the internet. I am pleased that my research on Henry is quite complete. I am sure you know how discouraging it is to hit brick walls. I documented Henry's records for the National Park Service and added some comments of my own. This is what I said: "Nothing would please me more than to be able to include letters and diaries written by Henry Frank Sidelinger. I have been researching his life for about 3 years and have found nothing of a personal nature. (His battle report following Little Round Top is on file at the Library of Congress. Somehow Henry and his heroics in the Civil War have received almost no recognition in his native Maine."

Henry's nephew Jacob who fought alongside him in the Twentieth Maine was killed at Five Forks, VA. His cousin, Orchard Sidelinger, who is buried in the Bornheimer cemetery in Waldoboro, Maine, died in a confederate prison. Henry himself died three years following the surrender, (probably while continuing to recouperate from wounds he received on the Boydton Plant Rd., Petersberg, VA.

His name was included on the Civil War monument in Union, ME. The Sidelinger family as a whole sacrificed a lot to the Union cause. Nine Sidelinger men served in the Union regiments. My great-grandfather Simon served in the first Rhode Island Light Artillery and was severely wounded. In the Seven Days Battle at Glendale, VA. Simon was honorably discharged following treatment in a Washington, DC hospital where he contracted tuberculosis.
